The Italian community of regional scholars and practitioners is widely represented by the Associazione Italiana di Scienze Regionali - AISRe. The annual conference of this association reflects most of the research work carried on in Italian universities. The website makes information available on members, research institutes and programs. AISRe publishes the main Italian journal in the field, with essays in English: "Scienze regionali".

Also relevant is the activity of the Società geografica italiana, established in 1867.

A few research institutes operate at the regional level. The main ones are IRER, established in 1974 in Lombardy, IRES, established in 1959 in Piedmont (www.ires.piemonte.it), and IRPET, established in 1968 in Tuscany.
